OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Asian equities ended the month down in August after a two-month rally. Markets remained cautious over the month amid concerns on the outlook of China's economy weighing heavily. Sentiment weakened due to missed payments by Country Garden, a Chinese property developer but encouragingly, there was limited contagion into the broader financial system. The US dollar appreciated marginally. Greater China, Singapore and Philippines detracted the most. Wide sell-off in communication services and technology sector dragged the market in Singapore, while concerns over growth as GDP contracted over the last quarter affected the Philippine market.

Fund Performance. The fund returned -5.01% in August, underperforming the benchmark by 35 basis points, mostly led by negative stock selection in consumer staples and materials.

Fund Strategy. Headline inflation has been trending downward globally as major drivers such as supply chain constraints, high shipping and energy costs, and commodity supply seem mostly resolved. With the Fed looking to reach the end of its hiking cycle and continuing to be more data dependent, Asian central banks may have room to pause or start their own rate-cutting cycles. China's policy is tilted towards more pro-growth and business, and authorities are likely more focused on sustainable growth over debt fueled spending. Earnings expectation in the first half of the year have disappointed largely driven by the weak recovery seen so far in China but Chinese consumption is expected to gradually recover, in turn supporting earnings. Looking ahead, although the risk of a US recession and weaker global demand still looms large, Asian corporates look well positioned for the next decade's big trends: investment in materials and manufactured goods to support carbon transition and high-powered computing spurred on by AI adoption. The fund will continue to invest in equity securities in the Asia Pacific region (excluding Japan) that are expected to pay dividends.
