OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Asian equities ended the month down in September for a second month in a row. Global market dynamics affected this month as US yields rose and investors remained cautious over tightening financial conditions. While Asian markets ended the month in the red, country performance was mixed during the month. Thailand, Greater China and Korea detracted the most, while Philippines, India and Singapore appreciated. Greater China fell despite further easing of domestic policy and some encouraging macro data due to "higher for longer" US rate concerns. Investors in Korea remained cautious as inflation numbers were higher than expected.

Fund Performance. The fund returned -3.15% in September, underperforming the benchmark by 291 basis points. Stock selection in financials along with the underweight in India dragged performance.

Fund Strategy. Headline inflation has been falling across the world as the major issues of supply chain constraints, high shipping and energy costs, and commodity scarcity seem mostly resolved. With the Fed looking to be much closer to the end of its hiking cycle and now much more data dependent on how much further it needs to raise short-term rates this year, Asian central banks may well have room pause or start their own rate-cutting cycles. While China's policy pendulum has swung more pro-growth and business, the sugar rush of a large fiscal stimulus is not expected as the authorities are more focused on sustainable growth and removing tail risks from the real estate sector. Chinese consumption will recover, albeit gradually over the coming year, in turn supporting earnings. Although the risk of a US recession and weaker global demand still looms large, Asian corporates look well positioned for the next decade's big trends: investment in materials and manufactured goods to support carbon transition and high-powered computing spurred on by AI adoption. The fund will continue to invest in equity securities in the Asia Pacific region (excluding Japan) that are expected to pay dividends.
