OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Global equities posted positive returns in November with the MSCI All Country World Index returning 3.8%. In the US, the S&P advanced 5.9%, buoyed by improved investor sentiment following Donald Trump's presidential election victory. The Federal Reserve lowered interest rates by 25 basis points, while US consumer price index (CPI) inflation increased to 2.6% in October from 2.4%. Job creation slowed significantly, with only 12,000 jobs added in October, below the 106,000 forecast and the previous month's 223,000 added jobs, largely due to adverse weather conditions and the Boeing strike. The composite purchasing managers' index (PMI) figure for November rose to 54.9 from 54.1 previous month, with services PMI of 56.1 from 55.0, and manufacturing PMI of 49.7 from 48.5. In Europe, the MSCI Europe Index rose 1.1% despite concerns over potential US tariff increases and ongoing political instability in France. Eurozone headline inflation climbed to 2.3% in October from 2.0%, largely driven by higher energy prices. Japanese equities recorded a slight decline, with the TOPIX slipping 0.5%. A weaker yen provided some support, but worries over potential US tariffs weighed on the outlook for exporters. Emerging market equities declined, with the MSCI Emerging Market Index falling by 3.6% as the region faced pressure from US trade policies and a strengthening of the US dollar.

Within the fixed income space, global fixed income markets posted modest returns in November, with the Bloomberg Global Aggregate Bond Index returning 0.3%. The initial market reaction to the Republican sweep in the US elections anticipated stronger economic growth, partly driven by increased fiscal deficits, leading to a rise in yields. However, the nomination of Scott Bessent as Treasury Secretary was well-received due to his balanced fiscal stance. As a result, yields across the US Treasury yield curve fell slightly, with the 2-year, 10-year, and 30-year notes decreasing by 2, 12, and 11 basis points to end November at 4.1%, 4.2%, and 4.4%, respectively. Credit markets outperformed the broader fixed income market, with global investment grade, high yield, and emerging market debt returning 0.6%, 0.8%, and 1.1%, respectively, as spreads tightened across all sectors.

Fund Performance. The fund returned 1.89%, underperforming the benchmark by 9 basis points. Security selection within the fund detracted from performance.

Fund Strategy. We expect yields to trend lower as the Fed eases policy rates on the back of decreasing inflation. However, we are cautious on the long end which may be sensitive to US election risk. Moving forward, the market will be looking out for the timing and magnitude of the expected rate cuts as well as the resilience of the labor market. Against this backdrop, the fund will continue to have a balanced allocation of safe fixed income assets (e.g. government bonds and high rated bonds) and riskier fixed income assets such as corporate and EM bonds for yield enhancement. In terms of corporate bonds, we continue to be selective on issuers with a preference for higher quality names in both investment grade and non-investment grade sectors.
